Learn Big Skills on Small Motorcycles

Everyone knows, it's more fun to ride a slow bike fast than it is a fast bike slow. Street Skills is now offering a one-day Trail Braking Camp on small displacement motorcycles. The course is based on the school's Cornering Confidence book and curriculum.

As a traveling motorcycling school, Street Skills provides the bikes and coaching. Students simply arrive, participate and enjoy themselves. The goal is to develop expert level cornering skills in a scaled down and less risky environment for transferability to full street riding activities.

"These little bikes are fun to ride and make learning new skills easier," said Jon DeVecchio, Street Skills Coach. "Parking lot courses for experienced riders make more sense on smaller motorcycles," Jon says. "Wrestling with a full size bike in a parking lot can distract from learning new techniques."

The Trail Braking Camp is a full-day training event with a maximum class size of eight (8). Students develop cornering skills related to braking, throttle control and hazard avoidance. Competitive challenges are included to strengthen participation and increase enjoyment.

Included in the $350 tuition price is a Cornering Confidence book and enrollment in the companion online course ($75 value).
